

Abstract of the Disclosure

A process for thermal benzylic bromination of a wide variety of benzylic compounds is described. Bromine is used as the bromination agent. Moderate temperatures are employed and the process can be used to produce in relatively pure form either mono- or dibrominated benzylic bromination products.